In both the New Age and the Spiritual Community, it's often stressed that we need to go back to Source and become ONE, i.e. merge with Source. We are either told that being separated, like we are now, is unnatural and part of the trap, or we have already been there and done that—it's time to return to Source. This has become equivalent to "going home."

Is this a relevant goal for humankind? Is it our next step, or do many people feel this way because of other reasons? That is what we want to discuss in this video.

Of course, people look at Oneness differently; some consider Oneness as having the personal experience of being One with Source, which we (Ariel and Wes) call the Divine Feminine (DF). This is a private inner journey of self-realization and is not the subject for this video. What we want to focus on here are two other aspects of Oneness, i.e. when all humanity is coming together as One and will merge with Source/God after physical death, or when the purpose is to become One by ascending through the dimensions—one by one, or as a human collective, by increasing our vibrations. In both these examples, the goal is to eventually become One with Source. Both these options are common in the New Age Community.

Let's start from the beginning. Before we all perceived ourselves being separated from Source, individualized by our souls/avatars, there was only a ONENESS. ONENESS only IS, and because She was ONE, She had nothing to compare with—She was just a static with no experiences and no reference points. When separation eventually happened, as discussed in previous videos, it created a purpose, and the purpose was Expansion and self-exploration. Source, via the Queen, created souls from energy and made them aware in order to have personal experiences. This is an ongoing process, and as we all can imagine, there are a lot of experiences left for souls to have in this and other multiple universes. This Experiment in Expansion has just begun, relatively speaking. Why would Source want to retract all that which is being created and go back to being ONE again? No more experiences. Even more important—is it even possible?

Think about it. To begin with, Source had no experience about separation—She didn't know what that was, so She remained being One. However, once separation was a fact, it was done! How can She go back from that, unless She chooses to forget all about separation, like it would never have existed, which defeats the whole purpose with separation, experiences, and expansion? How can She un-know something She knows? How can She unlearn something She's learned? Once the idea of separation is created, there is no way back. Therefore, how can we all go back to Source and become One again? How can that be possible?

Some will probably say that Source might want to retract or destroy all souls in this Universe because the entire Universe was a failure. Then, when this universe is destroyed, Source can create a new one, and we can start all over, bringing with us what we've learned. Theoretically, this is not impossible, but to Source, everything is a learning lesson. It's a universe of freewill, and we (the souls) are allowed and supposed to make our own choices, from which Source will learn more about Herself by observing the outcomes. To Her, there is no distinction between good and evil—it's all experience. It doesn't make sense that She wants to destroy the Universe and the souls therein because the souls don't make certain choices. If this were the case, it's not a universe of freewill, and Source can't learn about Herself. It would be as if Source was codependent or narcissistic and refused to look at the "dark" sides of Her potentials. If we perceive the Universe as being dark and hostile because of our choices, the KHAA Experiment is DEFINITELY not over! It only means that we need to continue until we make better choices. Sooner or later, we will be forced to, unless we want to continue to suffer. However, the KHAA is in general not an unfriendly place—quite the contrary--although there is a mix of beings there, too, of course.

However, if all these New Agers are so eager to expand their consciousness in order to once again become One with Source, why do they feel this way if there's not something inside them that feeds this urge? Doesn't that mean there must be some deeply rooted truth in it—a desire to end the entire expansion of consciousness and go back whence we came, take what has been learned, and call it good?

Yes, we believe there is a good reason why people feel this way, but it has nothing to do with the urge to merge with Source. We know that some people who hear this will protest already now, but bear with us, and we will explain.

The most common belief in the New Age Community is that if we raise our vibrations enough, we will ascend to the fourth or fifth dimension, where everything will be much better than here, and we will learn greater lessons in a peaceful environment and have more profound experiences. This ascension either starts with the individual, who then affects others in a chain reaction, until the entire planet ascends, or there are Harvesters (often ETs and Galactic Federations), who will harvest those of higher frequency. The latter is highly promoted in some channeled material, such as the very popular RA Material and also by the Cassiopaeans, to name two, but this has been planted into the human consciousness for decades—even centuries. Then, when souls have graduated from let's say the fifth dimension, they graduate to the sixth and so forth, until they are back to Source. The higher the dimension we reach, the more we become a hive-mind, according to the New Age teachings, until humanity merges into One omni-connected mind (again, see the RA Material as an example). Isn't that what the Overlords are planning to do with the Singularity?

This so-called "ascension process" is a serious distraction, and this narrative ultimately comes from the Overlords and their emissaries—an idea they have successfully implanted into the New Age spiritual community. En.ki wants us to believe in ascension, but the dimensions the New Agers believe they will ascend to are all within this Construct—we have previously talked about the Seven Heavens, which correspond to the so-called dimensions. In other words—ascension is a trap within the trap. The realms that are presented in these different dimensions do not exist without our input. We recently released a video on thought-forms, which is something we humans create all the time. This is crucial to understand, so if you haven't watched that video, we highly recommend you do. These thought-forms become alive and conscious if we put enough thoughts, intentions, and attention on them. This is exactly what the Overlords wish that we do because then we manifest the same realms we believe we will enter after the ascension. In other words, this does not make these realms more real than we think they are—they are just other control systems, just like the one we are living in now, which is also to a large degree created, maintained, and more and more solidly manifested in this dense reality by us humans. Moreover, who is the Source the New Agers wish to merge with? En.ki.

With that said, let's return to the original question; why do some people want to go back to Source and become One? We believe the answer is simple. Humans in the New Age and Spiritual Communities are often very emotionally wounded and have more often than not been severely abused—many have a history of narcissistic abuse, and many of those are still subjected to it. Complex PTSD is quite common in these groups. This is often the reason why they woke up spiritually to begin with. They felt something was very wrong, and they thought there must be something more to life than just suffering, and their journey began. The majority in these fields are probably somewhere within this category.

In other words, we, who are waking up, are fragmented because of some quite extensive abuse throughout our lives (see our videos on narcissism). Some people are willing to confront this fact and start seeing through the manipulation—emanated both from earth-bound "human" narcissists and the Narcissists with a capital N (the Overlords). Despite the pain involved when we confront things the way they are, some of us grin and bite through it. Many people are not willing to do that—it's too painful. Instead, they fall for the propaganda regarding ascension, Harvest, and Event, thinking that all they need to do is to focus on positive things and automatically ascend to a better place. After having understood the concept that we are all ultimately One, they jump on that bandwagon because being separated is too painful.

We would suggest that many followers of the ascension agenda choose that route, thinking that becoming One with Source again is the solution to regain happiness, bliss, and unconditional love—the opposite to pain and suffering. However, is it really becoming One with Source that they want? We suggest that, subconsciously, they just want to become Whole within themselves. On some level, they feel that they are fragmented, but do not put that in relation to the Synthetic soul and the trauma they have experienced. What they are actually striving for is not to merge with Source but to reintegrate their own fragments, i.e. getting rid of the Synthetic Soul.

It's a pity, because in the New Age Community, you are often not allowed to be “negative” or to look at the dark side of yourself. If you do, you are told that you decrease the vibration of the entire community. Instead, you are supposed to suppress your emotional wounds and only concentrate on “love and light” because if you do, your vibrations will increase, and you will ascend. Knowing what we know about narcissism and codependency, it becomes quite obvious that the New Age leaders are a mix of narcissists and very frightened codependents. They don't want others to address their wounds and triggers because if they do, these leaders might need to confront theirs, as well, and they are not capable or ready for that—it's too triggering. Consequently, like in any community, the rest of the members copy these directives and start policing each other. If you want to be part of the community, you'd better concentrate on love and light, or your abandonment anxiety will amplify when the community will go against you.

Here are some words of comfort. While we are still here in this Construct with our Synthetic Soul and all the trauma, wounds, and triggers, it's easy to feel that we've had enough, and we don't want to go out in the KHAA and continue your soul's journey—we are yearning for a “better place.” However, the soul, when in her pure and genuine state, is curious, enthusiastic, explorative, compassionate, and loving. Thus, when we've left this Patrix and also left the Synthetic Soul behind, we will be able to regain our core soul characteristics, and we suggest that when this happens, no one has any wish to become a static, immobile Spirit/Source again, without being able to directly interact with Expansion.
